

Choose The Lord, Here and Now!

*Nineteenth Century Evangelism
in New Zealand*

Robert Evans & Roy McKenzie

Many Christians who migrated to New Zealand in the nineteenth century brought with them high hopes of what might be achieved for the Kingdom of God in their new country. In many cases their expectations were formed by the folk-lore arising from wonderful movements of the Holy Spirit in England, or in Scotland, in previous years. In this book we look at two migrants who became among the most effective evangelists that New Zealand has seen. Both were lay people. Both came from Scotland. One was a lady, house-wife, gifted preacher, small of stature, but mighty in spirit. The other was a Sunday-school leader - lay pastor - YMCA and City Mission leader. One was a Presbyterian, the other was a Wesleyan Methodist.

Regarding the authors – Robert Evans is a retired Uniting Church minister in New South Wales, formerly a Methodist. Roy McKenzie is a retired Presbyterian minister living in Gore, Southland. They jointly published Evangelical Revivals in New Zealand, in 1999.

Choose The Lord Here and Now!

Choose The Lord, Here and Now!

*Nineteenth Century Evangelism
in New Zealand*

Robert Evans & Roy McKenzie

Robert Evans & Roy McKenzie